TAKE UP CITY COUNCIL SLATES

Three persons overcome by snake were carried from the top floor of a six apartment house in Malden, two firemen, who had been called to the scene, were badly cut by broken glass, and a third man from blaze was prevented only by quick action of the Malden department, at 10:45, from being badly, while causing loss of $5,000.

The bludge started in the basement

It was decided to hold another meeting for making public the result of the session. It was urged to give united support. At the close of the session, Maynard and others declared that no definite action had been taken.

IN STEEL CAGE
 Confined in a large, specially-constructed steel cage similar to that used at the Morris trial in Italy, two Italian anarchists are to face their first trial today at the Suffolk Superior Criminal Court. The cage is eight feet long, two and half feet wide and nearly six feet high. It is placed at the foot of the bar and is surrounded by two regular chairs. The accused is seated in the cage and is not allowed to stand while the attorneys make their case.

URGENT MOTORS TO HOMES FOR ALL CITY FIRE LOSS PLAYS OF BOARD

Comment was aroused all over the city today by the voluminous report of Mayor Hager's fire prevention committee. A detailed report of the committee, a treasurer of the building industry and a committee on the fire loss, is the principal feature of the report.

The day of the home-burns fire department is over, says the report. No more retrograde three-hour hitches galloping badly through the streets to the interest of every spectator, but the people, yet every home fire engine and hose cart.

William H. O'Brien, who represents the Central Labor Union on the committee, stressed from the section of the report relating to an extension of the building laws. On this Mr. O'Brien said:

"I cannot approve at this time the remedy proposed with the uncertainty as to the actual increased cost, which must of necessity be borne by the rate payer, without a thorough and exhaustive study of the problem of fire loss and the effect of the fire loss on the city's revenue. I cannot subscribe to any recommendation except one which would secure the greatest of fire insurance for the least cost with the least extension of the building laws."

For Flying Squad.

Summed up the committee is in favor of flying squadrons, taking teams of six to the regular stop and alarm headquarters, and making the fire engine and hose cart, and of maintaining the most hours in the firehouse in such a way that the determining of the department during the day would be done by the fire engine.

The recommendations are on these lines: To improve the fire department, the fire engine, hose cart, and alarm headquarters, and of maintaining the most hours in the firehouse in such a way that the determining of the department during the day would be done by the fire engine.

To have the fire department, the fire engine, hose cart, and alarm headquarters, and of maintaining the most hours in the firehouse in such a way that the determining of the department during the day would be done by the fire engine.

A building association, which will make it possible for men and women with no money to own their own homes in the city, will be the subject of a model society, paying for them on the installment plan, is the principal feature of the report of the fire loss.

If the legislature gives its approval the commission will purchase a large tract of land with money provided by the Commonwealth and construct homes and sell to workmen.

The commission proposes to lay out streets, parks, games areas and other recreation places.

HENRY H. HOBBS, AMERICAN'S FOOTBALL EXPERT, FURTHER Explains Duties of Backfield Men on Big Team

Every Lover of Football Should

In the previous article the duties of the halfback and fullback were discussed briefly. Today we shall continue this discussion in regard to the backfield.

The halfback in making a run around the end frequently runs nearly from one side of the field to the other, gaining only one or two yards, while if he had cut in earlier he could have gained more ground. It takes very little time for some people to see this long run from one side of the field to the other, but many others do not observe no ground is gained and frequently the runner is even thrown for a loss.

It must be remembered that to gain ground you must advance into the enemy's territory, and on an end run the quarter back takes advantage in cutting and actually advancing into the opponent's territory, the more ground will be gained. In these long runs the halfback is not to be seen, but he is in the backfield, ready to be called upon for a long run. The secondary defense on the other side will inevitably get into position, and so that they will not allow themselves to be outflanked, but they must be quick, for the runner with the ball will get an opening by cutting with only five or six yards.

Speed is Needed.

If a halfback can run with great speed, and at the same time use a high-angle kick, he will not be so likely to be downed so easily as though he ran in the ordinary way. Plain and simple, the football season of 1909, both men playing in the same Yale team, gave a striking example of this high-angle action. The team was successful because of their remarkable speed and high-angle action, which presents only one leg to tackle the end of the two men, and the runner when a runner advances into his high-angle action.

A change of pace to even field running is very often the means of avoiding tackle. The runner must advance with great speed and, when nearing an opponent, he will stop, down and avoid the tackle for the reason that he will not be so easily tackled at the exact spot where the tackle is made. Along with this, the runner must be rushing straight ahead toward the tackle, but only when both are running across the field. Along with this, the runner must be rushing straight ahead toward the tackle, but only when both are running across the field.

The straight arm is another method which can carry the ball into the enemy's territory. However, it is a thing not easily explained, but it is a thing that every lover of football should know. The straight arm is a thing that every lover of football should know. The straight arm is a thing that every lover of football should know.

The runner should use the straight arm in going straight ahead toward his opponent, but by a quick sidestepping change the straight arm to the outside, and the runner will be able to avoid the tackle. The runner should use the straight arm in going straight ahead toward his opponent, but by a quick sidestepping change the straight arm to the outside, and the runner will be able to avoid the tackle.

Now and then the spectators at football games witness a very brilliant run made possible by the dodging and weaving of the players. Only such players are gifted with an unusual ability of being quick on their feet, and they are the ones from their efforts along this line of work. Walter Johnson, the famous quarterback on the Chicago University team of several years ago, made a great name as an open field runner, and he was able to use the straight arm unusually well and to change his pace at will.

The world run in one direction, causing the secondary defense to get into motion to cut direction, and, in so doing, cause them of their balance he would quickly run in the opposite way, always guided by a series of dodges and weaves, and always attempting to make a long run from one side of the field to the other, hoping to outflank the defense.

In these sorts of dodges very frequently he would go in one direction, and then, without warning, he would turn and run in the opposite way, always guided by a series of dodges and weaves, and always attempting to make a long run from one side of the field to the other, hoping to outflank the defense.

Under the old rule, it was forbidden for the runner to be seen in the backfield, but now the runner is allowed to be seen in the backfield, and this has caused a great change in the way of running. The runner is now allowed to be seen in the backfield, and this has caused a great change in the way of running.

Line Plunges Must Be Heavy.

The line plunges carry an unusual weight for a back, and it is supposed to be very strong, which will aid greatly in knocking his way along where he is bound to meet opposition, and he must be as he has passed the line of scrimmage. To be successful and to gain ground after he has passed the line of scrimmage, he must be as he has passed the line of scrimmage.

It is much more to the advantage of a runner to push his way through the line than to be pushed back by the line, and it is much more to the advantage of a runner to push his way through the line than to be pushed back by the line.
